

DESIGN TRADE™

architects & designers building

The Architects & Designers (A&D) Building in New York City recently saw the expansion of its Snaidero USA showroom to an impressive 4,825 square feet. To celebrate the occasion, architects, designers and industry insiders were invited to experience the new showroom on display, while enjoying cocktails and hors d'oeuvres. Legendary architect Giorgio Borruo designed the showroom, creating a dazzling space while also providing a perfect forum to display Snaidero's luxurious collection of contemporary kitchen systems. Snaidero USA's president and CEO Dario Snaidero was in attendance, as well as Borruo and other key company officials. The expansion gives Snaidero an edge in the highly competitive world of high-end kitchen design by giving their showroom the same awe-inspiring presence as the kitchens they market.

Top row (left to right): Snaidero's vice president of communications Anna Paola and architect Giorgio Borruo; Guests look at a well-organized drawer of Snaidero's new Kube Kitchen; Middle row: A guest writes on the chalkboard wall of the showroom; Katherine M. Flaherty, MMPI's vice president of building products, writes Dario is cool; Bottom row: A guest writes on the wall; Attendees mingle in the showroom; A champagne toast to the new showroom opening.

